Anecdotal Analysis of Twitter Data

Using twitter data from the WeRateDogs account, I've compiled several interesting statistics about dogs. Perhaps these statistics really say more about their owners.

Favorite Breed

First up, the top five favorited dog breeds. I was surprised by a couple on this list. I was not, however, surprised to see two retrievers on this list. It looks like the golden retriever was most favorited by a good 25%. I had to look up what a Pembroke is. Turns out that is a Welsh Corgi.

Most Tweeted

Next I examined which breeds were tweeted about most frequently. Most were the same breeds from the previous list, but the fifth-place breed did change. Interestingly the French bulldog which was in the most favorited was not in this list.

Breed	Tweets
golden retriever	93
Pembroke	65
Labrador retriever	64
chihuahua	59
pug	40

Stages

According to the book #WeRateDogs on Amazon there are various stages of dog. For example, a doggo is generally a big or older dog while a pupper is generally a small or younger dog. The latter stage, small or younger dogs, had the most tweets by quite a bit.

Stage	Tweets
pupper	89
doggo	33
puppo	14
floofer	5

What is in a name?

Finally, I examined the most common names that owners had given their best friends. Here is the list of the ten most common names:

Name	Count
Charlie	10
Cooper	10
Oliver	9
Lucy	8
Tucker	8
Penny	7
Sadie	7
